PHONE CARDS UPDATE:

Some time ago we were told that Rechargeable Collectable Phone Cards were going to be the next big collecting fad, so we went out and had 1000 phone cards printed up. The company that was providing the phone service went out of business, so those cards are now "expired" collectables. But the guy who had set it up for us went to work for a new phone company and had 1000 new cards printed up at his expense (Thanks, Ken!). These are slightly different than the original ones, so there are two different, collectable cards (if there are any phone card collectors out there). If you got one of the old cards, and we didn't get you a replacement, let me know. Even if you used some or all of the calls on the old card, you can have a new one free.

The new cards work just fine, but they expire on December 31, 1998. If you have purchased one of the new ones, or won one in a game, keep in mind you have to use the 10 minutes of phone calls by then. (You use the card by scratching off that gold stuff on the back, to find your pin number underneath. Then you call the 800 number, punch in your pin number, and then the number you want to call. There is a second 800 number on the card which you can call to recharge your card with more minutes for 25 cents per minute. (If you recharge the card, it doesn't 'expire' for another year from the recharge date.) And when you recharge your card, Flying Buffalo gets a small cut of the money. By the way, if you don't use that ten minutes, the phone company gets to keep it - not us. We've already paid for that ten minutes.) We have started to give away a phone card with 10 minutes of calls prepaid, to winners of games. If you would like to BUY a phone card, we have a special offer: Buy a phone card for $7.50, which includes $2.50 worth of phone calls (25 cents per minute for 10 minutes) and get a free setup in one of our pbm games (a $5 value). Thus you get the card itself for free!

Or if you are just a collector, you can buy one of the expired cards for $3. Or if you are a collector, and don't want to buy any cards, send me any two different expired phone cards and I'll send you one of mine. I've got quite a collection of them now!

The 26th Annual Flying Buffalo Convention	31

Come to our 26th Annual Convention (see page 31). Save July 24-26, 1998 for this event. (Note: only 3 days this year).

See page 8 for some of our products in foreign languages such as German, French, or Japanese.

Last year we ran a TIME TRAVEL Starweb game. We'd like to do this again. If you have access to email, send me an email and ask for details. (You really have to play this one by email). The only special thing about this game is that ONCE during the course of the game, you can have us go back and run the last turn over, using NEW orders for you, and everyone else's same orders as before. This is a special variant that is not included in the ratings.

We have 7 players waiting for a "SLOW" 1939 WWBP game (one month between turns). Now is a good time to sign up.

New Starweb rating - see page 28.

(Or for that matter, if you don't collect them, but you have an expired one, send it along.)

EMAIL SERVICES:

We have recently changed our dialup service from "goodnet" to "mindspring". You folks (our great customers) won't notice this, as it is entirely internal. (Our email goes to our webpage first, and then gets automatically forwarded to whatever email address we are using at the moment). But we have discovered that it is not necessary to have to dial 20 or 30 times in the afternoon in order to get connected and read/send your email, or sometimes get supposedly signed on, but discover that reading mail is excruciatingly slow or not working at all, or suddenly hear a "click" in your modem and realize that you are no longer signed on and have to dial in again. If Mindspring is available in your area, we strongly recommend their dialup service. Call them at 800-677-7464 and if you tell them that MS517180 (Rick Loomis) sent you, I get a $10 credit towards my account!

FORWARDING MAIL:

Due to a comment by a player, I thought I would mention that it is considered impolite to forward someone else's mail to someone to whom it was not addressed. That is, if you write me a letter in confidence, it is rude of me to pass it on to someone else. This sort of thing does happen a lot in multi-player, diplomatic pbm games, and it's certainly not illegal, but it is unseemly. (Actually I believe according to federal copyright law, a letter belongs to the person who wrote it. You could sell it to a collector, but you are not allowed to "publish" it without the writer's permission! And making copies for everyone else in your game could be considered "publishing" it if anyone wanted to push it.)

CHANGES/CORRECTIONS TO YOUR TURN:

We charge you $2 to make a correction to a turn already submitted, but do not charge you anything if you send in a new copy of your turn and tell us to use it instead of the previous turn. Recently a player sent in a 3 digit correction to a turn, and wondered why we were going to charge $2 for this. The reasoning is not because we want the $2 revenue (although that never hurts) but because we want to encourage you to send in a new copy of the turn. It doesn't take us much time to make a correction to a turn, but if a serious mistake is made in your turn, that takes a LOT of time and causes hard feelings. Example: player sends in a turn for game A. He also sends in a turn for game B, but accidentally puts "Game A" at the top. This happens more often than you would think, and there is a 50/50 chance the player will miss a turn in game B. If we run game B first, he misses the turn, as it is not there. If we run game A first, we notice there are two entirely different turns, and probably are able to figure out which game the second one is REALLY for, no big problem. But if in the meantime, he phones in a "change" for game A, and by Murphy's Law, when we grab his turn to make the change, we grab the turn for game B (remember, it says "Game A" at the top), we probably will NOT notice that we are making the change to the wrong game. If the change does not work at all on game B, the only problem is that it didn't get done in game A. But by Murphy's Law of course, it will turn out that making the change to game B will end up giving 500 air force to the player's enemy or something like that. At any rate, it is likely to badly screw up two games, but if the player had just sent in a new copy of game A, and said "use this one instead of the other one I sent in" we would have done the right thing for game A, and most likely (when we noticed THREE turns for game A) would have found the mistake for game B also. So what's my point? We really would like you to send in another copy of your turn, with the correction made, and the comment "use this turn instead of the previous one".

LEE HAS ASKED:

me to remind you all that if you have a COUPON for a free setup in some FBI game, you cannot use the coupon for a game already requested, and you cannot mail the coupon in "later". The actual physical coupon MUST be IN OUR HANDS when we sign you up for the game. Sorry, but that's what they all say on the face of them, and that's the way our system is set up. We have no real way to mark on a game signup that a coupon is "on it's way" or to go back and cancel the $5 charge after a coupon arrives.

STARWEB SIGNS AND EMAIL:

If you email your Starweb turn to us, and you are creating or changing your "sign", put it LAST on your turn sheet, after all the orders and messages, and before the "end". The rules say the "next two lines" after the word "sign" will be the sign, but if you email your turn in, your two lines might turn into one long line, or might be broken up into four short lines, depending on the settings of your word processor. Therefor the program just takes the next 156 characters after "sign" unless it comes on the word "msg" or "end" on a line by itself. If you add any more orders after the "sign" they will probably end up as part of your sign!

BAR CODES/RECYCLING ENVELOPES:

Once again a player has missed the turn in two WWBP games because he sent the turns to us in an envelope that was intended for paying a bill to some other company. It took NINE days to get here from New York via Chicago. Folks, those little "bar codes" are on envelopes for the post office. Their automatic machines will route your mail to its destination without human intervention, as long as it has the right bar code. Many times we have seen someone recycle an old bill-paying envelope (or even one that came with junk mail) by sticking one of our labels over the address. This is fine with us, and we applaud recycling. But if you do this, you MUST make sure you cover up that mysterious bar code that was on the original envelope. That code will direct the envelope automatically to the address the envelope was originally intended for. If the label doesn't cover the bar code along with the address, blot the code out with a felt marker or black pen.

OTHER MISTAKES PLAYERS CAN MAKE:

We recently had a player tell us that he has been fired from his job for unspecified "security reasons" and as it happens, he had been using company email to send messages about his Starweb games. It sounds ridiculous to those of us who play games, but perhaps we should all remember that not everyone is a game player. Many company email systems are NOT private, and any email you send from your work computer can be (and is) scanned by your supervisor. If he or she is not a gamer, this person may not understand references to attacks, battles, captures, backstabs, plunders, bombs, firing, alliances, enemies, and so on. And what a person doesn't understand, he often fears. If you are not CERTAIN that your company/boss/supervisor doesn't mind you using the company email for personal reasons, and is understanding of gaming, perhaps you should limit your gaming emails to your personal email from home.

PSEUDONYMS:

We've said all this before, but it doesn't hurt to repeat it for newer players, or those who forgot it. Many players use pseudonyms for their pbm games, for various reasons. One player mentioned that he gave a false name to the players of his game, so they couldn't look up his phone number in directory assistance and call him at 2AM about the game. (He said his wife got very irate about it. And sometimes players from California, especially the younger ones, forget that 10pm in California is 1AM in New Jersey.) The most popular reason, of course, is that you made enemies in your previous game, and you are worried that they will hold a grudge. (We ask people not to carry grudges or alliances from game to game, but human nature sometimes overrules.) At any rate, some rules. If you want your fake name to appear in the ratings, you have to sign up for an account under that name. If you do that, we VERY MUCH want you to let us know it is really you. We can make a note of your real name under "comments" on our computer where no other player will see it. This helps us avoid all kinds of future problems. Of course you will have to get a new address for your fake name if you really want to fool your enemies. But if you get a post office box for your game mail, or have it sent to work, be sure and tell the post office what "name" your mail will be addressed to. Just because a letter is addressed to the right PO Box, is no guarantee that the post office will decide to deliver it. If they notice that the name on the letter is not included in the list of authorized users of that po box, they may return it to the sender (and give away your undercover attempt.) Be aware that any finished games using your pseudonym will NOT be included in the ratings for your real name. You cannot use several different accounts and combine the ratings. Each account will have its own rating. Thus your fake name will appear in the finished game results and the ratings, the same as if it were a real person. (PS I don't think we will allow you to use the name of a Flying Buffalo Employee as your fake name. If your name REALLY IS Rick Loomis, Steve MacGregor, Chuck Gaydos, Lee Russell, Jimmy Walker, Lisa Walker, Mike Stackpole, Ken St Andre, Steve Crompton or Liz Danforth, be prepared to send us proof of identity!)

Some of our games, such as Starweb, Heroic Fantasy, and Riftlords, we do not reveal your name to the other players during the game. Thus you can play under your real name, but tell the other players your fake name. That's ok with us, and we don't particularly pay attention to it. In Battle Plan and WWBP where we announce the players names at the start, you are allowed to choose to be "anonymous" at the start of the game. If you do this, of course, you can then write to everyone on turn one (except the other players who choose to be anonymous) and tell them your fake name and your address. Only problem with this is that very few people choose to be "anonymous" in WW and BP games, so you stand out. (And everyone in the game who has a hated "enemy" will suspect that you are him.) Therefore as a new customer service (and to avoid forcing you to sign up for another game account, which is inconvenient and a bit expensive for us) if you ask us to, when we announce the player list on turn one of a BP or WW game, we will list whatever name & address you want. You have to ask for this when you SIGN UP for the game, and we will do our best to get it right for you, but we can't guarantee it.

Keep in mind that none of this is "cheating". The only cheating would be for one person to try to play two positions in the same game. As long as you are only playing one position, we don't care what name you use to the other players. Also, I have had at least one player (due to a game dispute between players) tell us that Flying Buffalo should "regulate" the use of fake names or pseudonyms. It would be impossible for us to detect a fake name if you really worked at it, so we don't even try. This is why we don't make it "illegal". There are legitimate reasons for using a fake name, and we are not prepared to try and adjudicate the difference. What players tell each other is between them, and we do NOT interfere. You should be aware that this is a part of playing in a game with real people, instead of against a computer: sometimes people lie, or deliberately try to trick you. Many people have different ideas of what is "unfair" or "lying". It is NOT terribly common, but it does happen. We are sorry if it spoils a game for you, but we cannot guarantee a perfect game, or opponents who will react the way you want. We can only do our best to provide error-free moderating. (Note: although what you say between players is generally none of our business, actual physical threats are illegal, and should not be part of any game. Don't do it - we have no sympathy for it. The only person we ever banned from playing any of our games was doing this. Also: we frown on people trying to make excuses in their game by claiming that WE made a typing mistake. Generally if we make a mistake, and you point it out to us, we will FIX IT. And if we do not fix it, but instead give you free turns, we will CONFIRM to the other players that we made a mistake, if you ask us to. Thus if a player claims he did not give you fleet 77 because Flying Buffalo made a mistake, and you did not get a note from us telling you this, then either he is lying, or he is too lazy to ask us to confirm the mistake to you!)

Speaking of giving out the players names & addresses on turn one, the default is only your name & address. We will include your phone number and/or your email address only if you specifically ask us to.

UNDOCUMENTED FEATURES?

Here's a good one. A player in Starweb recently stabbed an ally, and now claims (to the former ally) that he was told of an "undocumented feature" of Starweb (something that is common in play-at-home computer games) that if you are at your ally's homeworld, declare him not your ally, and fire at his homeworld, you will double his industry. Now obviously this is a joke, and you would have to be a total idiot to believe it, but just in case there is anyone out there really trying to trick new players with slightly more subtle versions, for the record there are no such features in Starweb. These features are also known as “bugs”. In a play-at-home computer game, once the game is finished and shipped to the wholesalers, it cannot be corrected except by posting a “fix” on a webpage or whatever. Original copies of the program float around in the computer world forever, with the original bug intact. OUR programs are here in our office, and when a bug is detected, we FIX it. We have been running Starweb for 22 years now. The program does what the rulebook says it will do. There are some trivial little things that aren’t even mentioned in the rules, such as that if two fleets at the same world (neither belonging to the owner of the world) try to pick up the same metal, the lower numbered fleet will get the metal. But the only way to get extra industry without building it is to have one of the very very rare Black Boxes that creates industry. (Sorry to disappoint you!)

NUCLEAR DESTRUCTION RULES CLARIFICATION:

The Nuclear Destruction rules, in reference to “World News” say: “You are not allowed to sign a World News item with another player’s name or country name. “ The implication, of course, is that we are referring to another player “in that game”. However recently we have had a situation where someone signed a name of someone who was not even in that game, and we have decided that this is inappropriate. So for clarification, the “signature” in World News in Nuclear Destruction (or any other game that allows “world news”) must be either your country name, your real name, anonymous, or an “obviously” fictitious name. For that matter, any time you refer to another player by his or her real name in a game, it could be considered a “cross game vendetta” which we discourage or “in bad taste”. We don’t want to spoil your fun, but sometimes people get so mad about a game situation that they go overboard, and start badmouthing that person in other games. Please remember folks, it’s “only a game”. There is a big difference between saying “the Lithonian player is a lying, backstabbing, thieving slimeball who would sell his own mother for a stick of chewing gum” and “Wally Blunder is a lying, backstabbing, etc etc”. In order to “keep it in the game” we are going to encourage everyone to refer to each other only by their game names. As always, we reserve the right to censor anything we consider “in bad taste”. We have no obligation to forward or publish anything which we think might be slanderous, or offend our other customers.

1997 Virtual Convention winners:

Joe Paduch & Carleton LeDoux (playing one position) won the Battle Plan tournament (that’s a good idea, by the way, two people playing a tournament position so that if one of them is out of town or busy for a few days, the other can do the turns. I’m surprised no one else has done it). Frank McKenzie won the Heroic Fantasy tournament. Robert Whiting won the Starweb tournament.

RATINGS:

This issue, after a long absence, we are printing the HF ratings again. Since both HF and RL ratings are so long, I think I'm going to alternate between them every issue of FBQ.

STARWEB PHILOSOPHY: OH APOSTLE, SHOW ME THE WAY!

By Elliot Hudes and John Shannonhouse

The way of war or the way of points. These two often opposing forces are what make Starweb such a fascinating game. I often hear it referred to as a “War Game”. Although war is often present a more accurate description is a game of diplomacy. This common misconception often drives the game into patterns that can be counterproductive to winning. Let me flesh out this thought. I find there are two driving forces in the game -

- 1) The drive for points - to win the game
- 1) The drive for warfare - to win against your opponents

Mostly these two forces are counter productive to each other as they will utilize the same resources. The main resources of the game are worlds, ships and art. For simplicity I lump mines, industry and metal as world resources. Let's examine these things in more detail.

POINTS

Worlds - a prime source of points for the empire builder, apostles, pirates and even berserkers (through robotic attack or PBB targets). But even the art collector or merchant needs them or he has little to barter with, and the collector needs worlds at the end of the game to hold his museums.

Ships - they are points for the berserker as he cashes them in via robotic attacks and PBB's. Pirates need them for the capture of opponents' keys —another source of points which is usually undervalued. For empire builders they represent potential industry built and they are needed for the merchants to haul metal and for the Apostle conversion or Jihad attack. All sources of points. Once again they are a source of barter for the art collector. The pirate however is different - they are the source of power and pirates live for the 3 to 1 capture!

Of course ships and worlds are also necessary for security and protection. You can't win by points if you are on the verge of an early extermination. So, adequate defense forces, ambushes and owning worlds beyond ring 3 (two turns from the home worlds) makes good sense.

There is no doubt that the easiest source of points are those you get from your own empire and those given to you by your allies willingly. Indeed the resources necessary to wrest a prize from the enemy may cost you more in points than the prize itself. Often this is from lost opportunities to use your resources elsewhere. A smart enemy can often delay capture of territory almost indefinitely while you tie up your ships and keys which could have been busy building industry, robot attacking, converting etc.

WAR

What is it good for? As opposed to the old song - NOT “Absolutely Nothing”. There are some very legitimate reasons for a war. Often (too often) there are neighbors who -

- 1) Will not communicate. They are perceived as a threat or at best neutral neighbors you cannot trade with.
- 2) Openly hostile or a member of a rival alliance. War is necessary to ensure your security.
- 3) Gravy points - As I've said the majority of points are obtained by peaceful pursuits BUT there is no doubt that a well planned offensive by a tight group of allies can wrest control of an enemy's ships/territory/industry with few losses. This will add to your point base.
- 4) FUN - here lies the big problem. Despite the potential to slow your point accumulation it is fun to pit yourself against the Mongol Hordes. Your intellect versus the enemy. Add to this the other factors that promote war.

- a) Pirates - they virtually cannot win. They have a very unfavorable ability to score. Their special ability to capture is a military one. They often drive the game to war dragging other characters in to avoid being targeted and to reap the booty.

b) misconceptions - you read the description of the characters and you immediately figure that a berserker gets points for killing all life in the galaxy so he must be one bad ##S DUDE. WRONGO - It is much easier to robot attack a world to 50% of its population limit for the points and leave the world producing points in the hands of an empire builder or pirate. Especially if you have their consent. This also saves you from having to protect your armada doing the attacks. Similarly the Apostle - you get points for shooting population while on Jihad. It's much easier and safer to do it against your allies worlds. So in reality the most successful berserker or apostle should be a pussy cat, not a tiger.

So we have two driving forces in the game. If you can get them both to work for you then you are playing well indeed but as one of my allies once said, "One should not win the war but lose the game".

So, how do you handle these conflicting needs? The key is timing of ownership in a strong and trustworthy alliance. An overall strategy covers these conflicting needs nicely, but it is difficult to implement. I will cover the resources by type.

FLEETS/KEYS

Start out by getting fleets and keys to the merchants fast. They will help you get to full production quickly, and will also make the most efficient use of ships during war. Assuming sufficient metal, the merchant only needs 28 ships to keep the home world at full production. Any other character class needs 56 ships. That not only wastes 28 ships that could be used for the combat, but full production is reached faster with the merchant, so more ships total are available with the merchant hauling. Each home world should have at least two merchant fleets hauling at all times.

Some keys with few ships can be given to the berserker/empire builder/apostle. The berserker can trim population for points cheaply, while getting set up for later PBB runs. The empire builder and apostle can move through your territory capturing worlds with an AH order, thus saving gift orders. An early gift of a fleet with that understanding is much more efficient than gifting worlds. There should be at least one berserker fleet at each home world.

Pirates are next in line for keys and ships, just as you are ready for offense/defense. The keys should be given relatively early, so that the ships can be transferred and used as soon as combat develops, normally about turn 10. They don't get many keys, but they get a lot of ships. This is the cornerstone of the alliance offense. Working out judicious pirate captures of your opponents by transferring every spare ship to the pirate transfers the most critical resources from your opponents directly to you. Capturing opponent's ships is worth considerably more than twice as many ships built by your own industry.

Pirates maintain the lion's share of the ships through the early and middle part of the game. Berserkers traveling with the pirate will have ships transferred over from the pirate when it is necessary to either bomb or robotize a home world.

Apostles are frequently overlooked in combat, but they also play a very key role. Apostles should get keys with a moderate number of ships so that they can roam through an opponent's territory converting population. These converts will act as a constant spy network, even on worlds that were never captured or that were recaptured by the enemy. Knowledge is power, and the apostle's special ability makes him pivotal to the decision making process.

At game end, the pirate no longer needs such massive forces. Ships should be transferred in mass to the berserker and apostle for killing population, and to the empire builder for building industry. By that time it should be obvious who needs the most help, so this can be handled efficiently. However, the pirate should still keep the lions share of the keys, and should get lots of them at the end. These are sources of points for him twice. He gets three points per turn for each key. In addition, they can be used to capture fresh worlds from his allies for plunder. Which brings us to:

WORLDS

Unlike keys and ships, worlds are not at all interchangeable. Surprise. Empire builders do not get dibs on the first world gifts, and neither do pirates. The most time-sensitive player for worlds is the apostle. Every turn spent not owning a world is a turn spent not growing converts. The longer the delay, the less likely that full conversion will occur, which is critical for the apostle. Allies should examine their worlds for low population with medium to high growth limits, and gift them to the apostle fast. Worlds with medium to high populations with high population limits should instead be given to the empire builder. Not only does he get more points for owning them, but they become ideal jihad targets late in the game, so the apostle should avoid the temptation to grow converts.

After the Apostle gets all the best worlds for him, the empire builder should start getting worlds. Home worlds should be gifted no earlier than turn eight, just after the mines increase. This helps production at that key world, which is a key consideration that early in the game. Otherwise, examine worlds for total value and potential value to the empire builder, and gift the most valuable ones away as rapidly as possible. An ideal tactic is to gift valuable worlds that are at or near their population limit to the pirate. He plunders and gifts them to the empire builder. This should probably come first, even before the gifting of "rocks" to the pirate. And remember that worlds with few mines and no industry are not necessarily rocks. The population limit determines their value to the apostle or empire builder.

The Pirate gets worlds to keep only after the apostle and empire builder get theirs. The value of worlds for plunder drop off very rapidly, so a pirate can get worlds relatively late in the game and still get close to his maximum value out of them. A pirate's tendency to hold on to worlds forever is self defeating. It is much better to gift them away immediately after a plunder, and get another in return. He should get worlds from the apostle as rapidly as possible for plundering, because after the full conversion, he will not be able to own them long enough to get a plunder. Except for the apostle worlds and complete rocks, the pirate should concentrate on getting lots of worlds in the late middle and the end game, after they have already done full duty for the empire builder.

Any worlds captured in hostile territory should immediately be given to the apostle. After he he has spent one turn growing converts, they should go to the pirate for plunder, and finally should be gifted to either the apostle or the empire builder. The converts will keep the spy network going even after recapture by the enemy. The pirate plunder will slow down the resource growth in enemy territory.

Nobody else needs worlds, but everyone needs or at least likes

ARTIFACTS:

Artifacts have unique properties that must be addressed, and which are frequently ignored. The obvious one is points earned during the game. Everyone gets points for owning some artifacts. Each class has a "Greatest Treasure", where he gets as much as an artifact collector would. Some artifacts subtract points, and some (the nebula scrolls) provide no points

Foreign Language T&T

There have been several foreign language editions of T&T, Citybooks, and Traps Books. As part of the licensing deal, we had the franchisees send us 20 copies of the book for our amusement. I'm going to make a limited number of these available to my email customers. We are unlikely to get more of these, so if you are interested, order now!

The following are $20 each:

Grimmzahns Fallen (Traps One - German)

FallenZwooh (Traps Two - German)

Grimmzahns Fallen II (Traps Two - different German printing)

Katakomben des BarenKults

(Catacombs of the Bear Cult - German)

Labyrinth (German)

Taverne Zum Blauen Frosch (Blue Frog Tavern - German)

Meer Der Ratsel (Sea of Mystery - German)

Pieges de Grimtooth (Traps One - French)

Tunnels & Trolls Rules (French)

Sword for Hire/Blue Frog Tavern (Japanese)

Arena of Khazan and the original Sorcerer Solitaire by Walker Vaning (Japanese)

And these are $30 each:

Jeerjacken Und Landratten

(Citybook 2: Port of Call - German)

Todliches Al' Anfa (Citybook 3:

Deadly Nightside - German)

Citybook I (Japanese)

T&T Rulebook (Japanese)

$25 for 25 months deal

We are still offering our $25 for 25 months deal. Send us $500 now, and in return, we will add $25 per month for the next 25 months to your game account. You'll end up with $625 all together, quite a return. You can use the money for any products or services sold by Flying Buffalo, but the only restriction is that you can't take it back out as cash. The first $25 will be added approximately a month after we receive your payment. You will receive a signed document setting out the details. This is, of course, for our very best customers only. It's a good deal if you are spending at least $20 a month on our products. (Note: a couple of people have misunderstood this offer. You get your $500 back as part of the $25 a month. You don't get $500 added immediately to your account, and you don't get a $500 lump sum back at the end of 25 months. You only get $25 per month for 25 months. We don't want anyone to be disappointed.)

STARWEB RATINGS

A rating consists of your name, the number of times you have played Starweb as each character type, and your average rating as that character type. Your rating in a single game is your score divided by the winners score, carried out to three decimal places, and multiplied by 1000. The rating for "S" is your rating in standby positions you have taken over (not separated by character type). The rating for "X" is your composite rating, or your combined rating of all 6 regular character types (with at least 3 different). The rating for "*" is your rating in Multi games, and your rating for $ is your rating for standby positions in Multi games. The ratings are in alphabetical order so you can find the names of potential allies or enemies. Any player who has at least ten games rated, can have one game removed from the ratings for each ten games he has rated, so that one horrible score won't ruin your average.

Battle Plan Ratings

Must have played a Flying Buffalo PBM game in 1996, 1997, or 1998

The rating is given as (a,b) c,d e where a=how many games you've played, b=how many games you've won, c=how many opponents you've defeated (died before you did or at the same time as you), d=how many opponents defeated you (were still in the game after you were gone), and e=your rating. For the rating, you get 10 points for each win, 1 point for each opponent defeated, minus one point for each opponent who defeated you. This listing includes all games that ended as of XXXXX, and includes only regular BP games, and only people who are current players. The WW ratings are in a separate listing. We will award a plaque and a lifetime game to anyone who earns 1000 ratings points.

1939 WW Ratings

The ratings (in alphabetical order): # of games at that position, name of position, average rating at that position). Your "rating" is your score as a percentage of the winner's score. Thus if your final score is 80% of the winner's final score, your rating is 800.

Nuclear Destruction Ratings

(As of May 1, 1998)
 Must have played a Flying Buffalo PBM game in 1996, 1997, or 1998

A rating consists of the numbers (a,b/c) d,e f where a= the number of games you have played, b=the number of games you have won, c=the number of games you have tied, d=the number of opponents you have defeated (they died before you did or at least at the same time as you), e=the number of opponents who have defeated you (were still in the game after you were gone) and f=your rating. You get ten points for a win, 5 points for a tie, and one point for each player you defeated, minus one point for each player who defeated you. Players who won a special tournament game (not a convention game) got an extra bonus of 15 more points for that win. Your rating is your total number of points. We will award a plaque and a free lifetime game to anyone who gets 1000 rating points.

Won/lost ratings for StarWeb

For each game you were in, you get a win for each player you finished ahead of, a loss for each player who finished ahead of you, and a tie for each player you tied with. In other words, if you were in a 15 player game then it's treated as though you played in 14 separate one-on-one subgames. Your percentage is the fraction of these subgame that you've won with each tie counting as half a win. Standby positions and private games are not counted. We only list players who have played against at least 100 opponents.

Must have played a Flying Buffalo PBM game in 1996, 1997, or 1998.

$105 for $100 deal

(a 5% discount for our good customers)
 It costs us money to handle/process lots of little checks, and we would prefer that you send us one larger check instead of several little checks. To encourage you to do this, we offer a bonus. If you send us $100 all at once, we will credit your account with $105. (Note: this bonus is only if you spend the entire $105 on products and services by FBI. If you later ask for a refund of part of the $100, we will deduct the $5 bonus back out of your account. Also this bonus does not apply if you already owe us $10 or $15 when you send us the $100. We don't want to encourage you to get way behind in paying for your games, and then catch up with a big check, collecting a bonus at the same time.)

GET A LITTLE INTEREST IN YOUR ACCOUNT

In these days of low, low interest rates, a 12% return is quite generous. We have some high interest rate debts we'd like to pay off. If you want to loan us $500 or more at 12% interest (1% a month, paid to your account, or 3% a quarter as a check mailed to you), write or call and ask for Rick. You have to let us keep it for at least a year, and give us at least 90 days notice when you want it back.

PHONE ALERT

Name: _____ FBI Account # _____

If I am missing a game turn, FBI may call me at: _____

during the hours _____ or alternatively at: _____

during the hours _____. (Don't forget the area code!)

I understand that Flying Buffalo will attempt to call me IF they notice that I am missing the turn. I agree that they will charge me $10 for making the attempt to call, even if they are unable to reach me. I understand that they will try no more than 3 times to call, and that they will give me no more than six hours to get my turn in after I have been called. I realize that Flying Buffalo is not responsible for my missed turns, even if they fail to call me for whatever reason, and that they may try to call me after 9AM on the day the game is due, or just after the game is due. Phone Alert does not apply to Illuminati or Riftlords turns. Note that the purpose of this is to allow for those rare cases where a person who "never misses a turn" has his turn lost in the mail or whatever. It is not intended to be an alarm clock to remind you every turn that your turn is due.

Signature: _____

Note: keep a copy of this form for your records. If you have to change the phone numbers or hours, send us a NEW form; please don't ask us to change the old one, or just send in a new phone number without referencing Phone Alert. We keep this form in a special place & it may not get changed.

The 26th Annual Flying Buffalo Convention will be only three days this year: friday, saturday and sunday. Sign up and pay early and take a $5 discount from the quoted prices. (All tournament fees are refundable if you let us know in advance that you can't make it after all).

When: July 24-26, 1998 starting at 9am Friday and continuing until about 5 PM Sunday.

Where: At the Scottsdale Safari Hotel. Call 800-845-4356 to make hotel reservations. We have a block of rooms reserved for the special rate of $42 a night for one or two people, $67 a night for a suite (plus tax). Be sure and tell the reservationist that you are coming to the "Flying Buffalo Convention". (If you are driving, the Safari is at 4611 North Scottsdale Rd, phone 945-0721. If you fly, come to the Phoenix airport and get a ride with "Super Shuttle".)

Prices: There is no charge to attend the convention. Each tournament has it's own fee. Starweb: $99. Heroic Fantasy $80. Riftlords $75. Battle Plan $75. Feudal Lords $75. Nuclear Destruction $20. For Heroic Fantasy, we will be running higher level games for people who sign up for the tournament and who bring "graduates" to run in the higher level game for $10 extra per game. We will "graduate" all characters at the end of these HF games for use in mail games. For Riftlords, you can keep your ships and have them entered in a "real" game after the tournament, along with all their money, engines, etc. We will also be running the traditional Nuclear War card game at the end of the convention, free of charge for anyone who played in any tournament game, or $5 for others, with prizes for the winner.

Prizes: There will be a plaque for the winner of each tournament, plus a phone card for anyone who plays in two or more tournaments. (But please don't sign up for both Starweb and Battle Plan. It is very difficult to get your turns in on time if you play both of those games & we want to get in as many turns as possible over the weekend.)

Discounts: If you sign up before July 10th, and if you pay with your signup (check or credit card, not deducted from your account) you may take $5 off any of the above prices (except $2 for Nuclear Destruction). This is to encourage people to sign up in advance.

Show up on thursday night or stay over Sunday night for the traditional nickle ante poker games with Rick Loomis at the Flying Buffalo Offices.

Yes, sign me up for the 26th annual Flying Buffalo Convention.

COMPUTER PROGRAMS FOR SALE

We provide free ad space in FBQ for programmers who have written programs that will assist a player in any Flying Buffalo game (example: a Starlord map program or one that remembers the gate connections in Starweb). Up to 35 words free. We generally keep running these ads until someone tells us not to. So if you reply to one of them and get no response, please let us know. Also remember that we make no guarantees about anything advertised here unless it comes directly from us. We do not check out these programs.

BATTING AVERAGES PROGRAM FOR BASEBALL OR SOFTBALL. OK, it's not an FBI game, but I asked Steve to write me a program to use in keeping track of the batting averages of my softball team. Works great, easy to use, for IBM only, specify 3" or 5" disk. Only $30. Want to try it out first? Send $5 now and $25 if you like it. Write: Softball Program, c/o Rick Loomis, PO Box 1467, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

THE BUFFALO TALE: Get a "Bard's Tale" adventure made using the Bards Tale Construction Set based on Flying Buffalo's offices & employees. Send $10 for postage & handling to Flying Buffalo. Ask for "The Buffale".

STARWEB ASSISTANCE PROGRAM: Helps plan and check Starweb moves, keeps records, etc. Now available for Windows, complete with graphical user interface, context-sensitive help file, and more. Older versions for DOS, Macintosh, and Apple II still available. Only $15 for current Starweb players. Specify computer and disk type to Dick Donald, 1561 Blackhawk Dr, Sunnyvale, CA 94087.

HYPERCARD STARWEB ASSISTANCE STACK: for Apple Macintosh computers. Graphically navigate, record, display & print all web information dynamically. Compose & print diplomatic msgs, more. Send $25 for stack on 1-800K disk to: Iota, 7713 Shadow Hill, Houston, TX 77072.

Version 2.0 of Star Web Mapping and assistant program. You generate the trial map, and an IBM compatible computer shows you how the map looks. Also, generates a text file of the map, including connections, and fleets that you can run through a word processor to print using compressed print, or what ever your printer will do. Keeps track of fleets (ships and metals), worlds, artifacts, etc. Will handle E-Mail turns. Turbo Pascal 3.0 source code included. Demo Version with everything except Save $3.00. Full registered copy $15.00. Specify disk size needed. John Boyd, 4796 Chamber Ave, La Verne, CA 91750
